PUBLISHER/PLACE: Unlock the Past/St. Agnes, SA, Australia

PUBLICATION DATE: 2013

ISBN: 978-1-921956-05-8

DESCRIPTION:

It is not surprising to find sources about women located closer to the home such as in letters, diaries, cookbooks, sewing books and in the records of churches and charitable organisations. At the same time, these are the sources least likely to be readily available or can provide the broad range of information necessary to shape comprehensive stories of women. It is encouraging therefore to note that family history research and its unique methodologies offers valuable starting places to find women in the records and also to write their stories. Noeline Kyle will draw on her extensive research and writing from over 30 years of academic and popular publishing and from her latest book Finding Florence, Maude, Matilda Rose introduce some of her ideas on how researching and writing the stories of women is changing in the 21st century.
